This broad-ranging text offers a comprehensive outline of how visual images, language and discourse work as

'systems of representation'. Individual chapters explore: representation as a signifying practice in a rich diversity of social contexts and institutional sites; the use of photography in the construction of national identity and culture; other cultures in ethnographic museums; fantasies of the racialized 'Other' in popular media, film and image; the construction of masculine ...

ON. The mass media (newspapers and magazines, TV, films, radio, social media, etc) does not produce a complete, full and accurate reflection of the reality of people, places or events, but instead it constructs representations of those realities. This is what we call mediation. These representations are the result of the constraints inherent to the media (lack of enough air time on TV and radio or physical space in newspapers and magazines) as well as ideological bias and, in most ...
